Summary

Young, educated professional seeking new opportunities for advancement and service in the Edmonton area.

As a young professional with a diverse background in ministry, academia, and technology, I have frequently needed to rapidly acquire new skills. This variety of experiences has challenged me to grow in transferable managerial and technological skills.

With significant public speaking experience, I highly value clear and effective communication. For me, a project is not complete unless it is done well. I place a premium upon my personal character and work ethic. I pursue trust and transparency in my personal and professional affairs.

Presently, my goal is to secure a new position in the Edmonton area. I want to use my professional experience and focus on customer service as I pursue new opportunities for my career. As a continual learner, I want to build on my educational background in software development with rigorous self-education to further enhance my technical and professional skills.

Bob Jones University

GREENVILLE, SC, USA

Graduate Assistant, Mack Library

May 2006 – May 2010

The Mack Library is the primary academic library for the Bob Jones University community. As a graduate assistant, I carried out a number of ongoing duties while also assisting with special projects. My primary task was to abstract and catalog popular and scholarly articles stored in the Fundamentalism File, which is a resource center with over 118,000 items of information classified under 5,000 different subjects. Topics covered in this collection include religion, theology, biblical interpretation, ethics, history, and current events. I assisted students, faculty, and guests with research queries and supervised library student workers on nights and weekend shifts. Some of my projects included organizing, marketing, and teaching instructional workshops on the use of technology in student research; designing an updated web interface for the library catalog; writing a variety of online subject guides; and generating barcode labels for approximately 80,000 items using data from the library catalog.
